From Activity to Impact: Improving Decision Quality for HR and Volunteer Leaders

HR leaders are constantly asked to evaluate new initiatives, programs, partnerships, and priorities — often with limited time, limited resources, and competing demands. In both professional and volunteer leadership roles, it's easy for well-intentioned activity to consume energy without delivering the impact leaders hoped for.

In this interactive session, we'll explore a practical framework for improving decision quality in HR and volunteer leadership. Drawing on real-world examples, we'll examine how confidence, ego, and sunk costs influence decision-making, and how simple tools such as measurable goals, milestone thinking, and scorecards can help leaders stay focused on outcomes rather than activity.

Participants will leave with practical approaches they can apply immediately to workplace initiatives, chapter activities, and strategic priorities — without adding unnecessary process or bureaucracy.

Learning Objectives

- Identify common decision traps faced by HR and volunteer leaders
- Distinguish between activity, outcomes, and true impact
- Apply a simple scorecard approach to evaluate initiatives and priorities
- Recognize how ego and sunk costs influence leadership decisions
- Use goals and milestones to improve focus, alignment, and follow-through

The Leadership Prescription: Fix What's Broken, Fuel What's Next

What If Leadership Had a Warning Label?

Side effects may include burnout, disengagement, and quiet quitting.

What if leadership came with instructions or better yet, warnings HR leaders could actually use? This session pulls back the curtain on the unintended side effects of how change is commonly led and why even well-intentioned initiatives can quietly drain trust, energy, and engagement. Through real scenarios and moments of insight, we'll explore how everyday leadership behaviors either accelerate momentum or create exhaustion and where HR has the power to intervene.

Designed for HR leaders who shape culture and guide transformation, this session focuses on practical, actionable shifts that can be applied immediately. Attendees will leave with a sharper lens on their impact, renewed confidence in how to coach leaders through change, and clear strategies to help organizations move forward without leaving people burned out behind.

Learning Objectives

- Diagnose Leadership Behaviors That Create Burnout and Disengagement
- Strengthen Trust and Psychological Safety During Change
- Shift Leaders From Control to Influence
- Reduce Change Fatigue While Improving Adoption
- Integrate Recovery and Wellbeing Into Leadership Practices
